Living in Austria

Population: 2 million | Capital city: Vienna

Nine federal provinces - countless treasures. Austria is considered a jewel box for visitors - and for its inhabitants of course.

The cultural diversity from early history to modernity, attractive cities, river landscapes, lakes and mountains, the clean air, high quality of life, incomparable cuisine and safety all make Austria a country worth living in.

Say hello to Vienna.

Inhabitants: 2 million

What do you think of when you hear the word Vienna? Wiener schnitzel, the big wheel, Schönbrunn Palace and coffee houses? Of course! But Vienna offers so much more. According to international surveys, Vienna is one of the safest, cleanest and most diverse cities in the world. Everyone is welcome, regardless of gender, origin, age or religion.

Environment and recreation

The green spaces in the city, such as the Prater or the Stadtpark, are popular recreational areas. The Danube and its arms and banks serve as water sports centres, flood protection, recreational areas and transport routes.

Local transport

Here, more people own an annual pass for public transport than a car. The public transport system is considered particularly safe, clean and efficient. It offers an extensive network of underground trains, trams and buses covering some 1,130 km.

Culture

Three opera houses with world-class orchestras, around 300 museums with valuable art treasures, playhouses and theatres, Schönbrunn Palace, the Ringstrasse, the Secession, the Vienna Museum of Art History, St. Stephen's Cathedral and the Belvedere - it's not for nothing that the centre of Vienna is a UNESCO World Heritage Site.

Sports

There are countless sports clubs in Vienna and numerous opportunities for indoor and outdoor sports activities.
